Mediators Are Stalled in the Crisis

By M. HIGHTOWER
(AP)—Negotiations on the crisis were stalled and East-West agreement was abandoned today as four foreign ministers neared the windup. At the same time, diplomats met more and more about the question because of the American President's Premier actually was a question of authority rested solely on news dispatches from the Soviet Union. Secretary of State Christian A. Teller said in Washington that the American President's Premier actually was a question of authority rested solely on news dispatches from the Soviet Union. Cheyenne and Famous Rodeo Typify the Friendly West

FREE AND FRIENDLY Wyoming is symbolized by Cheyenne, capital of the Cowboy State, scene of Frontier Days—the Daddy of 'em all' rodeo—and location of Warren Missile Base. The Magic Circle leads west over a boulevard-like highway to Laramie, where the nation's first all-woman jury sat in 1870 and home of the University of Wyoming, noted for the beauty of its campus and sweater queens; through the Snowy Range country, where the road passes Medicine Bow Peak and Lake Marie; the fisherman's paradise around Saratoga; across into Colorado to Grand Lake, highest yacht anchorage in the world; spectacular Rocky Mountain National Park; the "Sweetheart Town" of Loveland; Fort Collins, home of Colorado State University's "Aggies".

Editor's Note: This is the 35th in a series of suggested highway tour maps which the Hope Star is publishing weekly. This is excellent material to cut out and paste up in a scrapbook for future reference when planning your vacation trip.

By EDWARD COLLIER

The free and friendly way of life that symbolizes the Cowboy State is all tied up in a colorful, compact bundle in Wyoming's capital city of Cheyenne.

Rodeos are a dime a dozen in the Great Open Spaces of today's West. But you've never seen one until you experience the Daddy of 'em all'—Cheyenne's Frontier Days, now in its 63rd consecutive year. Some 110,000 of the gay-in-heart invade this little city of 35,000 the last week of every July; most of them never go to bed during the Frontier Nights celebrations that follow the spine-jolting afternoons when Americans top rodeo performers compete for fat purses in bull-dogging, bronc and Brahma bull riding, calf roping and chuck wagon, Roman horse, harness and Indian pony relay races.

Old-time western false fronts adorn the very modern business buildings and citizens enjoy the opportunity to deck themselves out in cowboy attire. Frontier Days opens with a flamboyant parade that bears no resemblance to an apple blossom festival, except the beauty of its girls. The floats recreate the flavor of pioneer days with broad humor and a bold touch, to the delight of both camera fans and spectators. Sioux Indians, in full regalia, add to the informal pageantry.

Fascinating Town But any day of the year Cheyenne is a fascinating town. Take the state capitol, for instance. There is a movement afoot, abetted by the straight-faced managing editor of the Wyoming State Tribune, to replace the conventional gold dome with a heretofore cowboy hat. In the meantime, the capitol's pretty receptionist will guide any and all up into the unfinished interior of the present dome for a magnificent view of the compass panorama. To the south is Colorado and Longs Peak to the west Laramie and the Snowy Range, to the east Nebraska and to the north Warren Air Base, now under the Strategic Air Command, and which Cheyenne proudly calls the "free world's first operational missile base." Here some 3,000 career men are being trained.

Those who are interested with Western lore will not miss the State Museum, which occupies a wing of the handsome new State Office Building. Here is a priceless collection of historic Western and Indian artifacts, including a bison's head skeleton, a yak's head from the mol train; hand-made tools of the pioneers; and the Cheyenne Deception Stage Coach collection, which includes a variety of rifles and hand-made log boxes used by the early pioneers.

The displays of Western art, minerals and semi-precious stones would make any local or nearby tourist most anxious to see the place. Most unusual is the green-black, olive and gray rock, known as rare swirls and geometric beauty. Continued on Page Two

Order Halts Sale of Reducing Tablets

WASHINGTON (AP)—Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers announced the government today obtained a court order to halt interstate sales of a reducing tablet called "RX-120" because of alleged false and misleading claims for the product. The action in District Court at New York City was taken at the request of the Food and Drug Administration. The temporary restraining order was directed against the distributor of the tablets, Wilson-Williams Co., Inc., of Tuckahoe, N. Y., and its president Jack Elliot.

The Justice Department complaint charged the tablets were promoted by extravagant claims, including a representation that the product "fights hunger contractions and telegraphs a 'stop signal' to the brain when one is tempted to over-eat or indulge in between-meal snacks."

Won't Give Up Hope of Finding Father

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP)—"I keep thinking they'll find him," said Mrs. Hubert Larson. "I keep thinking they'll call us any minute and tell us they've found him."

The 28-year-old nurse waits with her two small children at the home of her parents here while Civil Air Patrol planes search the forests of western Arkansas for a small blue airplane piloted by her surgeon husband, Dr. Hubert Larson of Columbia, Mo.

Larson left Texarkana for Columbia Monday in a rented plane. He has not been heard from since. CAP planes from Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma have been combing the vast area for a sign of the one-engine plane. Last night, the Arkansas Air National Guard was called into the search and Gen. Frank Bailey said at Little Rock that Guard planes would join the search today.

State Sen. Jack Clark of Texarkana said he had asked Gov. Orval E. Faubus to activate National Guard ground units in towns between Texarkana and Fort Smith to help search for the plane.

So far, the Civil Air Patrol has checked out dozens of phone calls by residents of western Arkansas who said they either saw or heard the plane.

Residents of Wickes, Ark., said the plane circled there Monday and then flew north. A woman who lives south of Fort Smith said she heard an airplane, then a crash and an explosion.

CAP Wing Commander Ken Watkins of Little Rock said there is little hope of finding the pilot alive. But the search is being pressed relentlessly on the chance that the 30-year-old doctor was not killed in the crash.

Mrs. Larson is a nurse at a Texarkana hospital. She and the children were staying with her parents until housing could be found for them in Columbia, where Dr. Larson is a resident surgeon at the University of Missouri hospital.

"He's only been flying for about a month and a half," she said. "But it was a new plane, a good plane."

Watkins said the plane's color would blend with the foliage and make it difficult to see from the air.

"It's like looking for a needle in a haystack," he said. "No needle in a hundred haystacks."

Hectic Story Is Told by Grand Canyon Survivor

By REID MILLER

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP)—A teenage Georgia boy, hungry, blistered by the sun, scratched and cut by boulders, today told in a soft southern accent the story of his six-day fight for life in the wilds of the Grand Canyon.

John Manson Owens, 15, of Savannah, was found Friday lying on a sandbar along the Colorado River. His two companions on a hiking trip into the awesome gorge had perished.

He was brought by an Army helicopter from the canyon to a hospital on the gorge's rim.

There, from his bed and between sips of orange juice, he related an amazing story of courage, determination and death.

He told how the Rev. Eugene A. Gavigan, 30, and Walter J. Mahany Jr., 16, both of Savannah, lost in their bid for survival. He told how he won.

This is his story: "We left Friday (July 23). The padre (Father Gavigan) said 15 years ago when he was a little boy he found a silver mine down the trail. We talked him into taking us. We were head over heels to go."

"We took three bottles of water, a snake-bite kit, a first-aid kit and some food. All the water gave out the first day. Then we lost the trail at night. None of us could sleep because of thirst. Early the next morning we walked along a cliff for what seemed like miles. We didn't have any more food. We started eating cactus pads."

"I started yelling. Some folks on the other side started yelling like an ape or something. Somebody else yelled 'Do you really need help.' I yelled yes."

"Then we decided to go back to the river to get water. We came to a cliff. It was slick and steep. The padre said take off your shoes. We started down the cliff. The padre slipped. He turned around eight times. He hit his head, bounced a couple of times and landed on his back."

"Petie (Mahany) went into hysterics. He wanted to help the padre. We just couldn't make it down that cliff. I knew the padre was dead."

Lack of Funds Won't Hurt Spa Hospital

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Congress' failure to appropriate more than $200,000 for converting the Army-Navy Hospital at Hot Springs to a vocational rehabilitation center won't hurt the project immediately, state Vocational Rehabilitation Director Don W. Russell said yesterday.

"That's enough, along with the $200,000 the 1959 Legislature provided, to see us through this year," Russell said. "But I'm concerned that the conference committee said this would be provided federal funds that would be provided for the project."

A Senate-House conference committee yesterday agreed to earmark $200,000 of a $12,500,000 appropriation for the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation to the Arkansas project. But the committee stipulated this would be the final appropriation for that purpose.

"Of course, we'll need more federal money than that," Russell said. "But we're still hopeful. We may get some funds from unallocated money in the same appropriation. Then there is more than $100,000 in Hill-Burton act funds available to the state from last year and there'll be another Hill-Burton fund established this year."

"And there's always a chance the committee will change its mind. Congress operates from year to year."

Russell estimated about $1,200,000 would be needed annually to operate the center at maximum capacity until it becomes self-sufficient. Maximum capacity could be achieved in 18 months, self-sufficiency in three to five years, Russell estimated.

In another Washington development, Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) announced yesterday that the Senate Policy Committee has arranged for speedy action on a bill to transfer the hospital from federal to state control.

McClellan also said he expects no difficulty in obtaining Senate passage of the bill, which has already cleared the House.

This May Come as a Shocking Surprise to Many, But July Weather Just About Average

By Mary Anita Lasater
This may come as a shock, a disappointment, or, at least, a surprise to you, but the weather for the recently past month of July was more or less average for us in Hope.

"The weather is usually a pretty good topic of conversation for people around the world. So much depends on whether the weather is hot or cold, wet or dry, ordinary or extraordinary."

Crops are planted according to weather predictions. By weather conditions those crops grow and are harvested. As everyone realizes, of course, farming is not quite so cut and dried as this paragraph has thus far made it appear.

Why is that? Unexpected things like heavy rain, extended drought, unusual cold, or a heat wave can "crop up" and play havoc regardless of the warnings of their approach by the almanac, the weather map.

Many businesses other than farming depend a great deal on the ups and downs of the thermometer. To mention a few there are clothing manufacturers, ice cream dealers, heating appliance salesmen, professional and amateur fishermen, and the list could go on and on to include all sportsmen as well as folks just taking a vacation or going on a picnic.

Quite frankly, you're truly thought there was something unusual about the weather we've had in Southwest Arkansas have had during July, 1959, but apparently I was not weather-wise, for on checking with the University of Arkansas Experiment Station near Hope it was learned that everything has been pretty much "as usual."

The highest recorded temperature for last month was 91 degrees, but there was a lower high for the month of July in 1950 with 92 degrees as the top reading. If that sentence looks like a typographical error read it again, as "lower high" was the only thing it could have been called.

Well, it has rained a lot for this month, many have said, but alas! Filled again by the records. Our 2.8 inches of rain were also "just average," according to the records which date back 32 years. If you care to delve into any more ancient history than that you will have to look somewhere besides the local experiment station.

Rain at the first of July slowed the cotton season, but County Agent Oliver Adams said it is looking good now. As for Hope's famous watermelon, the only thing that showed their sale was having a few days without sweltering heat usually referred to as "watermelon weather." All that seems to be changing now.

If you think we are now "getting back to normal," stop. Don't say it. We've been there all the time.

Laos Army Units Fighting Reds

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Laos army units moved north today to combat Communist attacks on army border posts. The Laotian government said the attackers were equipped by Communist North Viet Nam. The attacks began a week ago.

McClellan also said he expects no difficulty in obtaining Senate passage of the bill, which has already cleared the House.

Adventurers Are Reported Adrift

PARIS (AP)—Two adventurers about the last Caniba II were reported adrift today in Polynesian waters, minus two companions who got stranded when they went ashore for water supplies. A French naval ship and a schooner were reported searching for the raft and its crew. The two men had been on the water for three months.

Steel Talks in Recess With No Progress Sign

NEW YORK (AP)—Negotiations between the steel industry and the United Steelworkers have recessed for the weekend without any indication of progress toward ending a strike which started July 15.

Joseph P. Plimagan, national mediator, met for more than two hours Friday with union officials. The meeting was described simply as exploratory.

Industry representatives said they were returning to Pittsburgh for the weekend.

The industry scheduled a lunch-negotiations conference for Monday. A second joint session between union and management officials, with mediators present, was scheduled for Monday afternoon.

The strike of 500,000 steelworkers has idled another 65,000 workers in related industries. The steel industry, proposing one-year freeze on wage raises, has offered to raise pension and welfare benefits this year. It also has offered to give a modest pay boost next year if the USW would agree to compensating economies in operations through changes in plant work rules.

The USW has termed the latter proposal an attempt to make it a company-dominated union. The union seeks a 15 cent hourly wage hike plus fringe benefits. It contends the wage boost could be paid out of company profits without an inflation-producing raise in steel prices.

Prestrike wages in basic steel averaged $3.10 an hour.

Sees Evil in Tax Exemption of Churches

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—A leading American churchman today predicted eventual revolutionary repercussions of present tax exemptions are continued for religious institutions.

The Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, of Philadelphia, said tax-free churches could "control the whole economy of the nation within the predictable future."

He added, in an article in the publication, Christianity Today: "I suggest that 100 years from now the present system of religious tax exemption by federal, state and municipal authorities, if continued, may present the state with problems of such magnitude that their only solution will be revolutionary expropriation of church property."

He said there already are signs of resentment. Dr. Blake, chief administrative officer of the United Presbyterian Church and a leader in national and world interdenominational organizations, urged churches to re-study their position regarding tax policy.

Some other church authorities have raised similar questions in recent years, as church endowments grow, and increasing taxes and government programs absorb a spiraling proportion of private income.

Dr. Blake noted that churches pay no inheritance or real estate taxes, and may own and operate businesses free of the 52 per cent corporate income tax.

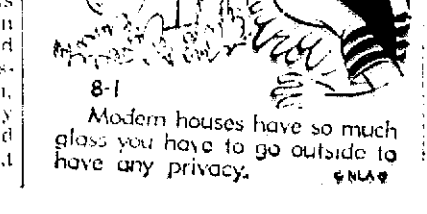

With such advantages, he said, churches could eventually dominate the nation's wealth.

How to Spot a Landlubber — and Keep from Being One
By WM. TAYLOR McKEOWN
Editor, Popular Boating
Distributed NEA Service

"I've just bought my first boat," a friend told us. "I have been spotted as a 'landlubber' beginner. What should I do?"

Start learning as fast as possible, we told him. Seamanship is important for safety and boating pleasure.

The beginning boatman can be recognized before he even leaves the dock. Does he pick up an ice chest and picnic basket which could throw him off balance, and then try to step onto the side of a small boat? Falling overboard right at the start can be very embarrassing.

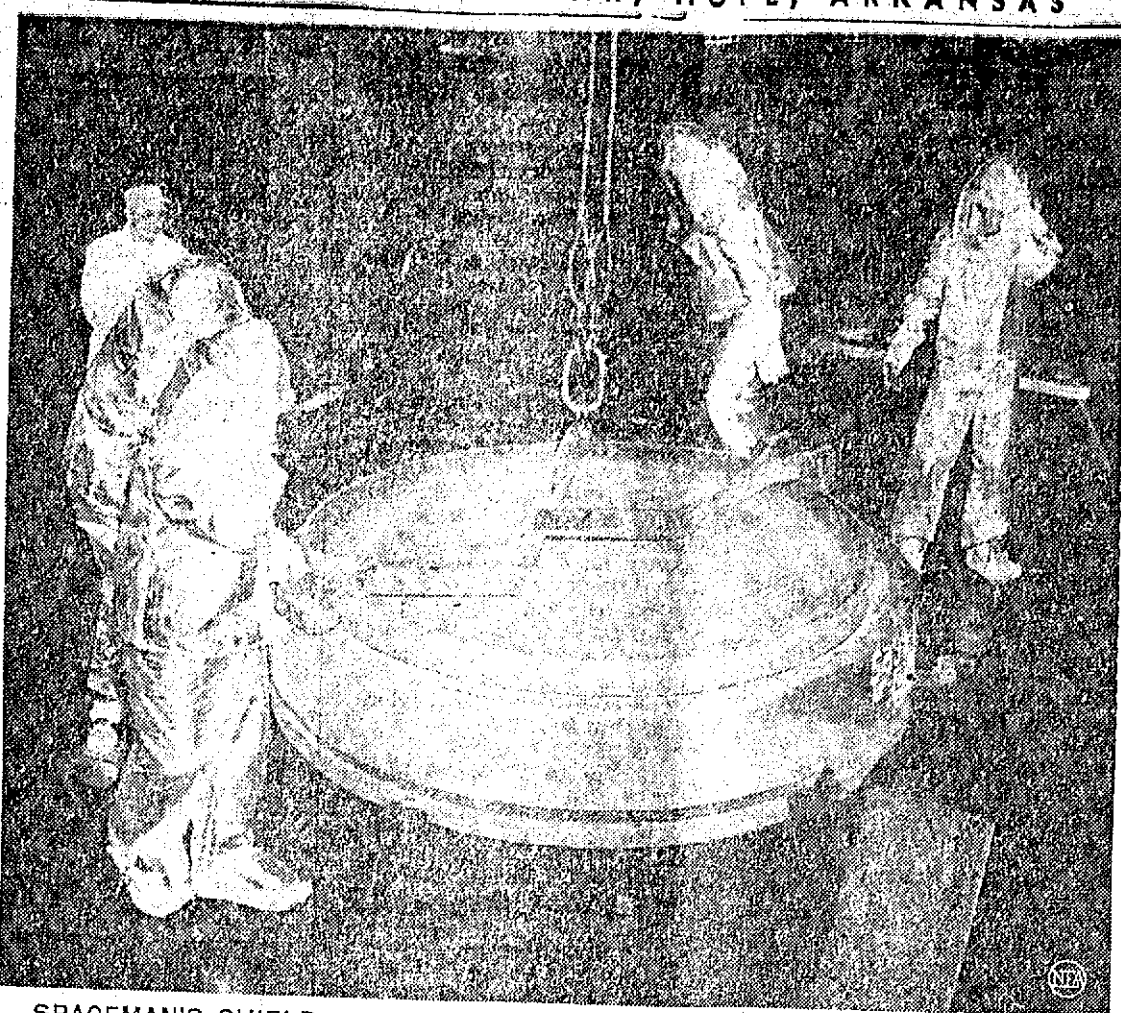

Note his equipment aboard. Are there life preserver jackets and cushions for each passenger and are his children already wearing theirs? Do you notice he has stowed aboard an anchor and lots of line, a bilge pump, spare paddle and probably an Isinglass kept shipshape?

Watch him leave the dock. Has he been watching other boats go in and out so that he can judge the strength of the wind and any current? Boats have no brakes and it is important to learn what speeds are necessary to keep steering control and still be able to stop in time.

How fast does he head out? He may be safely away from other boats and still throw out a bow wave that can rock and slam moored craft against the dock. Is he going out in threatening weather when more experienced boatmen and even commercial fishermen would stay at anchor?

Traffic is usually heaviest around a dock. Here is where the newcomer's knowledge of rules of the road shows up. Does he back out into the channel without giving approaching boats the right of way? When a boat comes toward him from the right, does he show he is a novice by cutting in front of the other craft, or worse still, steer a confusing course first one way and then the other while he tries to make up his mind?

Watch him offshore. Does he drive near swimmers? Speed past anchored fishing boats? Allow passengers to stand up or sit on the slippery forward deck of the small outboard?

SPACEMAN'S SHIELD — Aluminum-garbed workmen prepare to remove a saucer-shaped beryllium disc from the forge in Cleveland, Ohio. The steel-jacketed disc, 80 inches in diameter and three inches thick, will be the floor of the Project Mercury satellite. Called the "heat sink," it's designed to protect the capsule from tremendous heat during re-entry into the earth's atmosphere. Beryllium weighs only a fifth as much as steel and has rare ability to absorb heat.

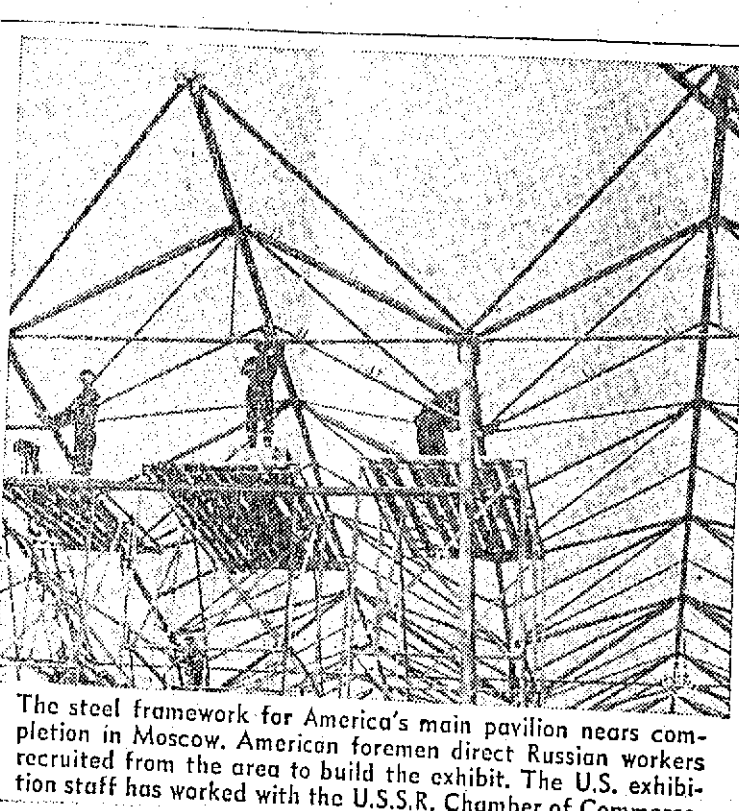

Purpose of Visits Should Be Clarified

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — A look-see is a good eye-opener.

"So how do I learn all these techniques?" our friend asked. Magazines, books, Power Squadron and Coast Guard Auxiliary classes and best of all questions and practice. Go offshore and try to pull up slowly to a buoy or floating piece of drift as if it were a dock. Approach from different angles. So find how your boat reacts to the wind and current. Experiment at your dock when no one else is around.

Ask questions. Every boatman likes to give advice and enjoys his sport more the more he learns. Find out from experienced seamen what they advise for docking procedures, equipment, safety practices and the weather.

The sure sign of the insecure and not-too-bright beginner is that he's ashamed to ask.

visible results. Long-range the thinking of both governments should be clarified and affected.

The Soviet Union's two deputy premiers, Frol R. Kozlov and Anastas I. Mikoyan, came this year to the United States where there is no broad discontent except perhaps on the racial issue. They looked around, and found a degree of prosperity the Soviets can only dream.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon has visited the U.S.S.R. and—so far as American news reports from there indicate—found hordes of cheerful, hardworking Soviet citizens who showed no broad discontent with their government or their way of life.

Most Soviet citizens now alive never knew any other government or way of life, and life is getting better for them in material things. In both cases what the officials saw should affect the thinking of their governments, particularly wishful thinking. And what the officials found can be multiplied many times by what the non-official visitors see in both countries.

The late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who shaped American foreign policy, seemed taken with the idea a number of times that if this country could keep up its "containment" policy long enough the Soviet edifice might topple.

He even went so far one time as to tell a congressional committee the Soviet system was on the point of collapsing. President Eisenhower's press secretary James C. Hagerty later had to explain Dulles didn't really mean collapsing.

Yet this attitude of Dulles, who never got a look around the Soviet Union raises a question: What would his thinking, and perhaps even some aspects of his foreign policy, have been if he had gotten an inside look?

Dulles, like Soviet leaders who are convinced capitalistic societies will eventually collapse was a victim of his own wishful thinking. He and they wanted to believe that they were seeing what they wanted to see.

President Eisenhower is known to feel there are considerable pressures within the Soviet Union which might persuade the Krens to accept a tension-easing agreement.

That makes sense and is a long way from envisioning a Soviet collapse.

It is reasonable to believe that the more the Soviets learn about the material advantages of the people in the non-communist countries, the more they will want the same, and the more the pressure on their leaders to meet their desires.

It is also reasonable to believe that as more Soviet citizens are educated they will feel an increased right to better themselves in the context of a government which affects them. Travel is a part of their education.

more and more Soviet citizens to this country — where they get a close-up view of what personal freedom means—should be a force shaping attitudes when they return home.

But again it would be wishful thinking to believe that Soviet citizens would want or would accept everything they see in American life.

For instance, they might feel repelled by a system which, unlike theirs, does not provide security from the cradle to the grave.

In short, there may be some things, but not all, which visiting Soviets might consider an improvement on their own system. By the same token, Americans visiting the U.S.S.R. may feel the same about what they see there.

In a long history of men, minds and governments there is a steady evolution, even though it may look painfully slow. No people or government can escape it.

So while this country may feel that letting Soviet citizens come there may be an effective way of bringing about changes in the Soviet Union, American visits to the U.S.S.R. may affect American thinking, too.

To think otherwise would be to assume here is nothing good in the Soviet Union and that everything is perfect here.

Note of Gratitude After 24 Years

EL DORADO, Ark. (AP)—El Dorado firemen have received a note of gratitude 24 years after they rescued a man trapped in quicksand.

A card signed by Harvey Ritchie said, "I want to express my deep appreciation and sincere thanks to you, especially to Fire Chief Frank Smith and assistants Chad Durett, Gordon Hughes and S. J. Scallion."

Ritchie, of nearby Hampton was caught in quicksand in a 40-foot well near Hampton, July 17, 1933. El Dorado firemen ran a hose into the well to free him.

Of the firemen cited by Ritchie, only Scallion still is on the force. Durett now is a state representative.

13-Pound Trout Caught in River

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The largest trout ever caught in Arkansas was hooked yesterday in the White River near Potter.

Lee Humphrey of Potter caught the 13 pound, 11 ounce monster on a silver flatfish. The fish was 29 inches long.

Game Warden Bob Spoon witnessed the weighing and verified the catch to the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission here. The commission recently began keeping records of fish caught in Arkansas waters.

Group to Take Up Arkansas Probe

WASHINGTON (AP)—A House Elections Subcommittee will meet next Tuesday to start consideration of questioned ballots in the disputed Hays-Alford Arkansas congressional race.

Chairman Robert T. Ashmore (D-SC) said it would take several sessions for his committee to study 3,000 to 4,000 disputed ballots.

Ashmore's committee is probing the write-in election last November of Rep. Dale Alford (D-Ark.) over the former Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.)

When the subcommittee finishes its work, it will report to the House Administration Committee. The full committee presumably will make a recommendation to the House.

God's Word

Come let us go into the House of the Lord

Says Come

GRACE

...that is greater. Grace that comes from God. Grace that has survived both victory and defeat. Grace that comes through long years of gentle conduct and tender devotion and utter dependance in each other. That's what these life-long partners have been able to garner. God united them and they have depended on Him to keep them. They gave over the control room of their lives to God. Devotion to His cause has sweetened the influences they exert. It hasn't been hard for them to keep up their church attendance record, nor administer to the sick, nor give to the poor. It made a difference when they placed their lives in the hands of God. It will make a difference with you too, for Blessed is the man that walketh in the path of righteousness.

You In The Church The Church In You

— form a combination for good. Every man, woman and child needs the influence of the church. So, come let us go into the house of the Lord. Let us support her program of service to humanity, be a faithful worker, a daily bible reader and attend services regularly.
